

OVERVIEW

Ethics and Health Law

The Florida legislature, various state administrative agencies, and the courts make and implement public policies on an ongoing basis that significantly affect the health of our population in many ways. The process of health policy making and implementation ought to be based in substantial part on the consideration of relevant ethical principles of social justice, individual autonomy, beneficence (doing good), and primum non nocere (avoiding harm). By examining the key policy issues arising in several specific contexts, this program will explore whether and how ethical considerations are taken into account in formulating health policy in Florida.

Accreditation

This activity has been planned and implemented in accordance with the Essential Areas and policies of the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME), through the joint sponsorship of the Florida State University College of Medicine and the Florida Bioethics Network. The Medical Education Council of Pensacola is accredited by the ACCME to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

Disclosure and Conflict of Interest Resolution

All conflicts of interest of any individual(s) in a position to control the content of this activity will be identified and resolved prior to this educational activity being provided. Disclosure about provider and faculty relationships, or the lack thereof, will be provided to learners.

Credit Designation

Applications for six credit hours have been submitted for physicians (including 1.5 hours on Medical Errors), attorneys (including Ethics), nurses, psychologists, and social workers.
